

Dear Members,

We have been contacted by Tony Panatti who is a student in Cardiff University. His PhD project requires access to beehives. He would like to visit as many beekeepers as possible to further his studies. He is hoping to collect gas and air molecules within a colony of bees with a view to early detection of diseases that may be present. His activity is planned for next year but he wants to be well prepared beforehand.

If you would like to help out, his E-mail is as follows;

E-mail PanattiT@cardiff.ac.uk

If you would like more information, you may contact Harold on harold.williams@virginmedia.com

Don't forget the two webinars that are coming up.....

We are pleased to announce our own association webinar on comb management and hive health and hygiene delivered by Edmund Thomas. To take part, please see the attached details and follow the link to register;

Please find below, information on the latest Webinar from WBKA.

Dear Beekeepers

The next in our series of webinars will focus on the topical issue of varroa control. Lynfa Davies NDB will present on this important topic and all are welcome. We will start with a short, general Q&A session so, if you have a particular issue which has puzzled or challenged you this season, submit your question in advance to l&d@wbka.com You will, of course, have the opportunity to submit questions during the event and we will pick up as many of these as possible after Lynfa's presentation. We do hope you can join us for the live event but, if not, we will be recording it and will share a link to the recording in due course.

To register for the webinar please use the link below. When you register we are asking whether or not you belong to a beekeeping association and if so which one. This is being asked so that we have some idea about who our audience are and will not be used for any other purpose. As stated above the webinar is open to anyone that wishes to register and is not restricted to WBKA affiliated members.
